DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE

	OF	6
FRUIT TREES	S AND ROSE T	REES
*	GROWN BY
EDENVALE	NURSERIES,	LTD.
SEAS	SON 1922-23

In sending out our Catalogue for the coming season, we beg to say that our Stock is very extensive, healthy, and in a thoroughly satisfactory condition; we particularly invite a trial by those with whom we have not yet dealt; purchasers are cordially invited to inspect our Nurseries, and trees can be selected at any time of the year.

Customers who cannot personally select their trees, and who order through the post or otherwise, may rely on trees of the Best Quality being sent.

All previous Lists and Catalogues cancelled.

Customers are requested to observe that trees of the same Age on the same Stock, but different Varieties, are not always of the same Size, as Varieties differ somewhat in their habits of growth.

Customers are requested to indicate plainly the Railway Station (or if through the post, the Post Office) to which the trees are to be sent.

Packing Materials are charged cost price; every care is exercised in packing trees to ensure their safe arrival.

NO WARRANTY.

While taking every care to send out trees healthy and true to name, no responsibility will be admitted for errors of description, losses by frost, drought or in transit.

PLEASE NOTE.—Orders will be executed on these conditions only.

Unknown Customers must please accompany their orders with remittances, or be good enough to favour us with satisfactory references. A remittance should accompany all small orders. Cheques, Postal Orders and Notes made out to "Edenvale Nurseries," and payable at Krugersdorp.

All Cheques must carry exchange.

SPECIALITY.

In these days the tendency towards specialisation of one particular branch of an industry has largely developed. There is no doubt that any Nursery confining itself mainly to one or two lines of the Nursery business can send out a better quality article at a lower price than a firm that deals equally in all the multifarious branches of Nursery work. That most important branch, viz., the propagation and cutivation of Fruit Trees, Rose Trees and Flowering Trees has received our careful attention and study for many years.

PLANTING SEASONS.

We make a speciality of sending out Rose Trees, lifted free of soil, during the months of December and January, and from May to end of August.

We would like to point out from long experience that Rose Trees planted during the rainy season give far better results than those planted when the cold drying winds are about.

WHEN ORDERING.

In ordering fruit or Rose trees it is sufficient to state the number as in Catalogue, and quantities required. It is indispensable to give the date of Catalogue as the numbers vary in each issue.

Also, it must often happen that some particular tree cannot be supplied, from its being early sold out. It will be well to add a few extra numbers from which the deficiency may be made up.

All Fruit Trees and Rose Trees sent out by "Edenvale Nurseries" are Transvaal grown, therefore far hardier than those grown in a hot and forcing climate, and more likely to give better results.

HINTS ON ROSE CULTURE

Arrival of Package.—It should be taken to a shed or sheltered place and unpacked. Roses should then be taken from the bundle and thoroughly saturated with water covered over with a damp bag or moss until ready to plant. If weather is too dry to plant on arrival, it would be advisable to dig a shallow trench in a shady spot and heel them in until weather is suitable, at the same time keeping the ground round about fairly moist.

Preparation of Ground.—This is very important. Ground should be trenched two feet deep, mixing a fair quantity of rotted manure with the soil. If the soil be old garden soil add good, fresh loam. Mark out the ground for each tree and form a basin. Fill this with water a few days before planting.

Situation.—A place apart from other trees or plants should be assigned to them if possible. The beds should be sheltered from high winds, but not surrounded by trees, as closeness is liable to cause mildew.

Planting.—Roses can be planted from June to September, and are often successfully planted from December to February. Great care must be taken to avoid deep planting. In the case of dwarf roses, place the union of the stock with the bud two inches beneath the soil. Above this point the rose will throw out its own roots, which, in addition to the roots of the stock, will give the plant a remarkable degree of vigour. Spread the roots out carefully. Do not place the manure on the bare roots, but first place some fine soil between them, then a little well-decayed manure, then finish off with soil. They should then be firmly pressed down with the foot to make soil firm about the stem. Give a good soaking with water, then place a top dressing of decayed litter or stable manure as a protection from the drying winds and sun. Choose a fine day for the operation.

Watering.—Should the spring and summer prove dry, give a good drenching once a week. If the soil is well drained, little harm can be done by watering, but the rose will not thrive in a stagnant soil. After every watering, and the surface of the ground has dried sufficiently, the surface should be lightly stirred to prevent the soil baking and cracking.

Manuring.—Roses, being gross feeders, to produce fine flowers require a quantity of manure. Cow manure is much the best for our climate. It is best applied as a surface dressing in the autumn, which should be forked in during the early spring. Liquid manure also may be used with advantage, applied during the growing season.

Insects.—Insects are very troublesome to the rose-grower. For green fly, which attacks the young shoots in spring, take 4 ozs. of quassia chips and boil for ten minutes in a gallon of soft water. Then strain it, and while cooling dissolve in it 4 ozs. of soft soap. To this may be added another gallon of water, and apply with a syringe.

Mildew is a fungous disease caused by sudden changes in the atmosphere. One of the best remedies is flour of sulphur dusted over the affected parts as soon as it makes its appearance. This should be done in the morning when the dew is on the leaves. Another good remedy is sulphide of potassium, \(\frac{1}{4}\) oz. to the gallon of water, applied with a syringe.

Pruning.—The majority of people do not understand the object aimed at in pruning.

The first object should be to select a few strong, well-ripened shoots. These shoots should be cut back to five or six eyes, with the top bud looking outward. All dead and unripe weakly shoots should be cut clean out, leaving the centre of the plant free and open. This refers to hybrid, perpetual hybrid tea and tea roses. The climbing and pillar varieties should not be cut back; the tips of the shoots only should be taken off and the shoots thinned For exhibition purposes, cut back to three or four eyes. As soon as flower buds have been formed, it may be necessary to remove weak growths and also those that are not required, and to throw all the strength into the most promising growths.

TO OUR PATRONS

The varieties of roses are so numerous, and the habits and colours so varied, that it will be advisable that purchasers not thoroughly acquainted with them should, when ordering, state the purpose for which they are required, and either leave the selection to us, simply mentioning the colours desired, or, if varieties are specified, instruct us to substitute others in place of any that may be unsuitable.

That everything supplied by us may prove satisfactory in every respect, we ask for close attention to the above suggestions.

In the body of the Catalogue will be found the detailed descriptions of all the pedigree roses we are offering for the season. The new pedigree roses are all of sterling merit, colours ranging from the deepest crimsons, pinks, whites, yellows, etc., coupled with an abundance of perfume, and will uphold the reputation which our roses have made for themselves. We beg to assure our customers of our continued careful attention to all orders which they entrust us.
